SUITS AGAINST A PRINCE.

[A. P. NIGHT REPORT.]

KINGSTON (Jamaica,) March 11.—

[By West Indian Cable.] Prince Clarence, chief of the Mosquito Territory and protégé of the British government, who resides in Jamaica, has been sued by local merchants. His solicitor sets up in defense the allegation that Prince Clarence was the sovereign chief of the Mosquito Territory prior to and at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and therefore is en-titled to all the rights appertaining to him as Prince of the Mosquito Terri-tory.

The solicitor contends that Clarence ought not to be compelled against his will to answer in a legal action before any of the judges or before a minister of the Queen in Jamaica; and on behalf of his client he denies the jurisdiction of the Jamaican courts. This raises an interesting question, as Prince Clarence is considerably in debt, and the settlement of the issue is important to him.

GRAND OPERAHOUSE.

[A. P. NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, March 11.—[By Atlantic Cable.] A farge and fashionable audience filled the Grand Operahouse this afternoon, and gave the members of the Comedie Francaise a warm reception on their first appearance since the fire which destroyed their old home, the Theatre Francaise.

Mile. Dudlay was the recipient of an especially enthusiastic greeting. Handburghest and hats were waved, and bouquets of roses and violets were threwn upon the stage from all parts of the house. Deeply moved, the actress responded by throwing back kisses.

"Andromaque" and "Le Malade imaginaire" were performed and the accoustics of the Operahouse proved better than had been expected.

To their doing so we oppose the Monroe doctrine. Therefore, if we intend to make good the affirmations of the latter, we must be prepared to resist, forcibly, if need be, any attempt to obtain adjacent territory or ports which may serve as stations for a navy hostile to ourselves. It is natural that European nations should wish such positions, that Germany, for instance, as has been lately rumored should wish the Danish Islands—8f. Thomas, etc. Her right to buy them is as good in international law as ours; the Monroe ucctrine depends not upon legal right, but upon the moral right of our indispensable interests and derives its chief support from the fact that it is not worth while to incur our enmity, pushed, perhaps, to the extent of war. "Now, the one preparation for war in a maritime region like the Caribbean, is a navy large enough to be effective. Ports are quite secondary. They are necessary to a navy which needs a local base of operations, but they are useless without it, especially in the Caribbean, because conditions there are so backward as to give no local resources. Positions held there not only must be fortified, but everything to support shipping must be imported, and a steady stream of supply maintained. This can only be done by the navy keeping the sea open, which, at the same time, secures our other merchant shipping.

OPPOSITION TO SBARETTI.

CUBANS DO NOT WANT HIM.

[A.P. NIGHT REPORT.]

HAVANA. March II.—[By West Indian Cable.] Comparatively few people altended today's meeting to protest against the appointment of Mgr. Sbaretti to the bishopric of Havana. A committee of four, including Gen. Maximo Gomes, was appointed to visit the bishop and to inform him respectfully of the wishes of the Cuban people. It was argued that it would be better to take this course on the chance that Mgr. Sbaretti would express a willingness to resign, and thus save the work of organizing some forty subcommittees of protest from various parts of the discuse, as was originally proposed.

A resolution was offered advocating that a protest be sent direct to the Pope, and that nothing further be done intil his answer had been received, but this was negatived by a large majority, it being argued that the movement might grow cold were

PHOENIA FARO BANK ROBBED. PHOENIA FARO BANK ROBBED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jim Hanifan, a miner unknown here, made a daring single-handed attempt to rob a faro bank in the Palace saloon in broad daylight this afternoon. The Palace is the largest gambing house in the Southwest, and is constantly thronged with people. Hanifan entered the saloon and sauntered toward the faro loon and sauntered toward the faro table with a long knife in his closed-fist. Approaching the bank, he plunged the hand with the knife into the money box, grabbing a handful of gold pieces and remarking, "I want it." He walked out through the front entrance, bran-dishing the knife, then fied through the principal, streets with a large crowd dishing the knife, then fied through the principal streets with a large crowd close at his heels. He held the crowd at bay with the knife, his sole weapon, but was finally captured by officers and the money was returned.

In view of Hanitan's remarkable demonstration of nerve, the majority of pursuers seemed indisposed to check his run for liberty. His boldness in the gambling nouse so electrified the crowd that the people appeared unable to move, and Hanifan met with no resistance in escaping from the saloon, although his capture could easily have been effected had the gamblers had time to recover from their keen surprise. They made no attempt to produce pistols, with which the house has been liberally supplied since the recent raid on the fare bank by two desperadoes.

WESTLAKE IS WANTED.

MAY HAVE KILLED WATTS. MAY HAVE KILLED WATTS.

1A. P. NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, March II.—A man named Mark Westlake is wanted on suspicion of knowing something of the Watts murder. He and another man, who is also missing, are known to have had Watts's personal effects, about the time the latter is supposed to have been killed, and that they destroyed some of the papers. The other articles have been recovered by Sheriff Johnson, also Watts's watch, which Westlake is thought to have sold. lake is thought to have sold.

Westlake is a man of about five feet six inches; 40 years of age; dark complexion; quite bow-legged, and toes in; is slightly baid on the crown of his head; has small, blue eyes, and speaks in a piping voice.

NEGRO KILLS TWO WHITES AND IS LYNCHED.

[A. P. NIGHT REPORT.]

VALDOSTA (Ga.) March 11.—Word was received here tonight of a double murder and lynching near Jennings.
Fla. Two white men of the name of Carver were killed by a negro whose name could not be learned. The negro was captured by the Sheriff. A mob quickly gathered, took the murderer away from the officer, and swung him to a tree.

German Commercial Items.

BERLIN, March 11.—Protests against the Meat Inspection Bill have been forwarded from the South German and Central German chambers of commerce. The association of manufacturera against special taxation has received 155 petitioners against the department-store tax. The Bundesrath has reached the government bill fixing a mail steamer line to South Africa, increasing the subvention to 1,359,000 marks, and also increasing the number of ports touched.

LITERATURE.

VIIL-THE GREEK DRAMA.

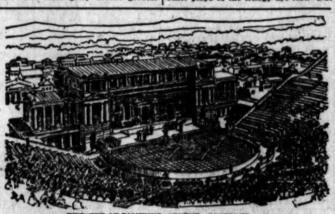

The drama is an original creation of the Greek genius. Here, as in so many other forms of literature, the Greeks were without models. According to Aristotle, the Dorians claimed to have invented the drama, the Peloponnesian tragedy, the Megarians comedy, and the very name drama, by which designated action, was appealed to in proof. The Greek drama grew out of the celebration of the adventures and sufferings of the god of wine, who was regarded as the representative of the reproductive powers of nature, his suffering symbolizing the decay and sleep (cold and storms) of nature in winter, tragedy was named "goat song," either because a goat was originally the prize because a goat was originally the prize given, or, more probably, because the chorus consisted of satyrs disguised as goats. Comedy means either "village song" or more probably song of the comus, or revel band. The satyr drama. named from its chorus of satyrs and taking its subjects from mythology, hed its place after tragedy and comedy had borrowed most of its functions, probably through a sort of religious conservatism.

Dramatic representations were not of the race. We know the names, but little more, of several, of the earlier dramatists — Phrynichus, Choerilus, Pratinus, Thespis—but the real father and founder of tragedy was Eschylus, who was born in '55 B.C., and fought in the Persian wars. In 479, after the battle of Platea, Athens, which had borne the brunt of the war, was in ruins, her walls and temples dismantled and her territory laid waste. Just fifty years later Pericles died. In that short period Athens had become the art center of the ancient world, tragedy had culminated and was already showing signs of decay, and comedy had reached its acme under Aristophanes. In English literature there is almost a perfect parallel in the speedy and splendid development of the drama from Marlowe to Shakespeare.

In Greek tragedy there are but two supremely great names besides Eschylus—i.e., Sophocles and Euripides. Eschylus is said to have written 90 plays, Sophoc.es 113, Euripides 22. Of these have come down to us from Eschylus and Sophocles only seven each, and 'from Euripides eighteen, the "Agamemnon" and "Prometheus" of Eschylus and Sophocles only seven each, and 'from Euripides eighteen, the "Agamemnon" and "Prometheus" of Eschylus and Sophocles only seven each, and 'from Euripides eighteen, the "Agamemnon" and "Prometheus" of Eschylus and the "Antigone" and "Edipus Tyrannus" of Sophocles belonging unquestionably to the greatest dramas of all time.

In the "Prometheus" the Titan who in defiance of the tyranny of Zeus has brought fire to mortals suffers such punishment as only a god could devise or a demigod endure. Everything is on a colossal scale, the other characters being gods or demigods, the chorus sea nympha, and the scene the bare cliffs of the Caucasus Mountains. What means Eschylus found to effect a reconciliation justifying both Prometheus and Zeus we can only guess, since the other plays of the trilogy are lost. But Dionysis, in the month Elaphebolion (March-April), was the new tragedies exhibited. Then Athens made holiday before her alies, whose tribute was then brought by representatives to Athens, before delegates from all other Greek cities, and before the whole assembly of her own citizens. At the Lenaes, in Gamelion (January-February), which was more of a home festival, comedy had chief piace. At the country Dionysis, in December, usually only plays were given which had been already exhibited in the city. The greater Dionysia, like a modern musical festival, lasted only a few days (three or four), and on each day regularly three tragedles, one comedy and one satyr were exhibited, which, with the dithyramb and other musical features, made a very full day.

If a poet wished to exhibit at the ment of the same problem.

The "Agamemnon," which belongs to the only extant complete trilogy, deals with the murder of Agamemnon on his return from Troy by his queen, Clytemnestra. The characters are all human, and the character drawing is clear and powerful. Clytemnestra outdoes Lady Macbeth on her own ground, and the scene in which the captive prophetess Cassandra goes to her death is without a parallel for effectiveness in the Greek drama. The whole is a great masterpiece and doubtless stamps Eschylus as one of the half-dozen greatest poets of the world.

The "Edipus Tyrannus" of Sophocles powerfully sets forth the successive steps by which the prosperous King Edipus discovers that he has unwittingly murdered his own father and become the parent of children by his own mother. The inevitable way in which "the action moves straight and undistracted toward the catastrophe" doubtless justifies Aristotle in treating the "Edipus Tyrannus" as the type of the highest Greek tragedy.

Antigone, the daughter of this same Edipus, is in Sophocles' hands the most interesting woman of Greek literature, and hence this is the most celebrated Greek drama. She defies the law of the land in burying the corpse of her propher Polynices and suffers martyry. tures, made a very full day.

If a poet wished to exhibit at the greater Dionysis he applied to the chief archon, if at the Lenaes to the second archon, for a chorus. If his request was granted there was assigned him a choregus, who chose from the singers of his tribe a chorus, had these trained by the poet or chorus leader, and provided for their maintenance and costumes. This liturgy, as it was called, was at once a burden and an honor, and was often performed with great magnificence and expense. The chorus, consisting in tragedy of twelve (later fifteen) persons, in comedy of twenty-four, executed dance movements (stro-land in burying the corpse of her brother Polynices and suffers martyr-dom in consequence. It is impossible to conceive of loftler language than her defiance of Creon:

consisting in tragedy of twelve (later fifteen) persons, in comedy of twenty-four, executed dance movements (strophe and antistrophe) as they sang, and indispensable accompanists were the flute player and the lyrist. The three actors—originally one, increased by Eachylus to two, by Sophocles to three—distributed all the roles among them, the parts of women being taken by men. The actors were allotted to the parts and paid by the state. In the costumes of the tragic actors especially characteristic were the long, flowing parti-colored robes, the high-soled buskin or boot and the imposing head-dress and mask, the whole being intended to lend dignity and increase the stature. For comedy characteristic was the soccus or low shoe, but the dress was more like that of everyday life. There was not much opportunity for action on the Greek stage, and none for play of feature, so that the prime requisite for an actor was a fine musical voice. The audience at Athens, numbering 20,000 to 30,000, and sitting in the open air, had sensitive ears, so that the actor must have a distinct, musical voice, which could carry far. The people, whose feeling for rhythm was probably as nice as that of modern musical audiences for time, would storm if the meter was spoiled, a quantity missed, a syllable dropped or an accent misplaced.

The antique areak theater consisted in the main of two parts, the audi-

They are not of today nor yesterday, But live forever."

Of the three great tragic poets Eschylus is the greatest poetic genius. The legend that the god Dionysus directed the boy in a vision to devote himself to tragedy might well have been true. A very demiurge he isclemental, god-intoxicated, of sublime imaginative power, creator of the most splendid lyrics. The masterful self-sufficiency of his Clytemenstra, the plastic beauty of his Iphigenia, the sublime unyieldingness of his Prometheus—these things and many more place him among ancient poets perhaps second only to Homer.

Sophocles had perhaps the happiest lot among the ancients—health, beauty, wealth, victory with his first tragedy and the primacy in letters for all his sixty years thereafter, such repute for gentleness as to make him the idol of the people and for good judgment as to induce the populace to elect him general and counselor. And so he was the fit exponent—artistic and spiritual—of the age of Pericles.

Very different from both was Euripides—the lonely thinker, philosophical radical, innovator in poetry and music, "prophet of a cosmopolitan humanity," kinsman of the troubled spirits of all ages, forerunner of romantic drams, most appreciative of feminine worth, realist, and so bringing his characters down into the everyday atmosphere, and hence charged with replacing the heroic by the sensational. He is seen at his best in such plays as "The Bacchae," "Alcestis" and "Iphigenia in Tauris." Both Eschylus and Euripides are nearer to us than Sophocles. The Hebrew scriptures have prepared us for Eschylus, whom we recognize as akin to Job and Isaiah; through his more modern spirit we can apprehend Euripides most readily of all. Sophocles is an Athenian of Athenians, and fully to appreciate him we must become in a sense Attleized.

Good translations are Morshead's and Miss Swanwick's of Eschylus, Plumpter's of Eschylus, and Sophocles. Campter's of Eschylus and Sophocles. storm if the meter was spoiled, a quantity missed, a sylable dropped or an accent misplaced.

The antique reek theater consisted in the main of two parts, the auditorium or theater proper, and the oval or round orchestra for the evolutions of the chorus. As dramatic spectacles were given in the open air the Greeks generally availed themselves of the side of a hill so shaped as to constitute a sort of natural amphitheater. At Athens the theater of Dionysius occupied the southeast slope of the Acropolis, where the spectators at with their backs to the Acropolis and their faces toward Mount Hymettus and the sea. Alsies radiating from the center enabled the spectators to reach the rows of (marble) benches. The part reserved for the movements of the actors, whether higher than or on a level with the orchestra, was small, since the actors were few. The back of the stage represented in tragedy a temple or palace; in comedy a private house or a street. The scenery was simple, consisting of hangings or painted woodwork, and triangular revolving prisms at either side, properly decorated, facilitated change of scene. The curtain was pulled up, not let down. The subjects of tragedy were taken from mythology or mythical history, and the persons were the gods or demigods and heroes of the trace, the main outlines of the story being slways known to the audience. Tragedy was really a religious celebration. Comedy, on the other hand, represented not the solemn but the frolicome spirit of the season, and the subjects and characters were taken from daily life, as was the language used.

In marked contrast with Athenian lateness of development in general was the sudden growth of the drama. In the early part of the fifth century coin a sense Atticized.

Good translations are Morshead's and Miss Swanwick's of Eschylus, Plumptre's of Eschylus and Sophocles, Campbells' of Sophocles, Way's of Euripides, and most excellent versions of single plays might be mentioned, e.g., Browning's "Alcestis" (Balaustion) and "Hercules Furens." To be read in connection therewith may be recommended, besides the histories of Greek literature, chapters in Jebb's "Classical Greek Poetry," Symonds' "Greek Poets," Mahaffy's "Social Life in Greece," Moulton's "Ancient Classical Drama," etc.

WHOLESALE BAPTISM AT A NEW YORK CHURCH.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Negre mea, women and children, some deaf, some mute, and others blind, but most of them whole and sound, to the number of 184, were plunged into a tank of water and trought out of it gasping and breathless in the Mt. Olive Baptist Church today.

"This is the largest number of persons ever baptised in one Christian church," exclaimed the pastor, Rev. C. T. Walker, as he led the last of the dripping procession from the font to the pew.

The ambulance was summoned from the Roosevelt Hospital, and three old colored women, who had fainted because of the shock of immersion, combined with the poor ventilation of the church, were carried to their homes. The extraordinary scene was the culmination of a series of revivals in this church, which have caused more than seven hundred persons to take communion, besides the 184 who were immersed today.

The World and Christ. A THE Central Baptist Church, Corner of Flower and Pico streets, Rev. Philip J. Ward, the pastorelect, preached both morning and evening. His evening texts were found in Matthew, and in the Ecclesiastes, and were: "All is vanity and vexation of spirt," and "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give your cent." The Tuesday Club met spirt," and "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

He said that both texts were the words of great kings, and the utterances of the Jewish nation's most representative men. The one text was a wail of dissatisfaction, spoken, however, by the richest and wisest and most-cultured of men, by one who had had every opportunity given him in his search for happiness; by one who had immeasurable wealth at his disposal, and who using that wealth lavishly, had searched for happiness, both in the heights of intellectual pleasure and in the depths of the grossest vices; but his verdict again and again repeated was this, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity and vexation of spirit." On the other hand, Jesus, with no wealth, with little culture of the schools, with no prestige, yet had His heart and hands overflowing with peace and happiness, and called to myriads of others to share with Him, crying: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Solomon was but one of a great multitude of men who in every age have found out the unsatisfactory nature of the world's pleasures. This dissatisfaction with the world is the universal experience of all thinking men. They do not deserve, however, to be called thinking men who do not take the great subjects of God and eternity and the judgment into account in their thoughts. Nothing else but Crhist and His religion can satisfy the yearnings of the human soul.

Thousands Visit the Famous Battle-ship in San Pedro Harbor — Com-mander of the North Pacific Squad-ron Comes to Los Angeles and Will Be Entertained Today.

The battleship Iowa, to which Rear-Admirel Kauta, commanding the North Pacific squadron, recently transferred his flag, arrived off San Pedro yesterday morning and will remain there till this evening. The Iowa is on her way to Santa Barbara. She saited from San Diego Saturday night.

A committee went down to San Pedro early yesterday morning and extended to Admirel Kauts an invitation to visit this city. The committee was composed of Frank Wiggins, F. K. Rule, W. A. Cooper, T. E. Gibbon and George H. Stewart.

The warship, when the committee approached it, was receiving a cleaning from the coat of dust which had settled all over her while coaling at San Diego Saturday, and she had not yet been thrown open to the public, but the admiral sent a launch and invited the committee to come aboard.

The visitors were shown to the admiral's cabin, where he received them very condishly, the recounted a number of personal reminiscences in a style that delighted his visitors, and had an officer detailed to show them about

Southern Pacific wharf near Santa Monica about two months ago. There was virtually no monopoly of the transportation service, and the provisions for accommodating those who wished to examine the big fighting machine afloat were sufficient. The Banning Company ran the tugs Warrior and Collis from both the Terminal and Southern Pacific docks. Both tugs had special permits from the government inspectors of hulls and boilers, allowing each to carry 250 passengers, which number is much greater than is allowed for regular transportation service on longer trips. Besides the two tugs there were numerous small-power craft running from the various wharves and iandings about the inner harbor. Most of the small-power boats were of sizes which, under the government standard of tonnage measurements, are not subject to limitation of number of passengers. All that could be crowded on with comfort were carried. The rate charged by the Bannings and most of the other boatmen, was 50 cents for the round trip from the wharf to the steamer. Some of the small and less pretentious power craft carried passengers at 25 cents each to the battleship and return.

Considering the crowded conditions of the small and less pretentious power craft carried passengers at 25 cents each to the battleship and return.

Considering the crowded conditions of the boats, the handling of the crowd, which was estimated at 4000 persons, was regarded as singularly free from accidents. The sea occasionally was a bit rough, which caused some inconvenience in getting on and off the lows, but nothing occurred to seriously mar the pleasure of the visitors. One youngster is reported to have fallen overboard from the gasoline steamer J. C. Elilott, but the last Beard of him was that his clothes were drying rapidly. The Bannings moored a sow to the port side of the ship by the gangway aft, and passengers by the Banning tugs were put on and off the lother boats were allowed to come up to the starboard gangway aft to put passengers aboard and take them of.

The Waists and the Weather are Here Together.

We have just received several new pieces of all wool imported embroidered French Henriettas with silk polkadots. White dots on two shades of red, heliotrope, silver gray, navy blue, tur-quoise blue, marine blue and czar blue. Also red with black spots and black with heliotrope and light blus spots.

We consider this fair notice to the people who have been waiting the arrival of these goods.

Silk and mohair striped crepons, exquisite ribbon effect crepe de chine, poplins, novelty wool crepons in shades of gray, blue gray and tan: poplins in several plain handsome colorings, silk embroidered polkadot effects and other high novelties from French looms. The prices on these patterns run from $12.50 to $45.00. There are no two patterns in the collection exactly alike and there is certainly an advantage in an early selection.

If the weather last Saturday did not make you think of Shirt Walsts, nothing else will, and if you are thinking of them-think of Coulter's. Waists as plain and practical or as elaborately beautiful as they can be made. Original designs of the best waist makers in New York, and that means in the world, are here. | Novelty stands out on every waist exclusiveness is stamped on many, and the beauty of each particular waist is the crowning glory of the whole assortment. Nothing could be more tempting than this great showing of spring waists this morning. For Fancy Waists. Novelty Percales.

New Waist Silks.

Perhaps 75 or 80 pieces of the newest, prattiest waist silks that we have ever shown, will be on view this morning. The styles are new and very different from anything we have ever shown in waist novelites; handsome effects in rich corded satin stripes, satin and lace effect stripes in 2, 3 and 4 color combinations; taffets silks in lace open-work stripes in a handsome variety of plain shades; crepon striped taffetas in a large variety of plain colors including all the new spring shades; a beautiful line of white coided lace stripe and satin strips silks especially brodight out for handsome white silk waists; prices from $1.25 to $1.75.

New Silk Waists.

New Silk Waists.

Extremely new from one of the finest waist makers in New York. Exclusive styles and will not be shown elsewhere in Los Angeles. Full fronts with three rows of stitched and tucked ribbon for garniture, also three rows of the same down the back; sleeves are handsomely stitched with a V, 4 rows of stitching the full length of the sleeve, stock collar hand somely stitched to match the sleeves; in black at 26.50; in the new bluss, lavenders, sliver grays, reds and other leading colors at $7.50. In the pure white of spotless silk at 27.52.

Silk waists of French taffeta silk, full front; elaborately trimmed with hemstitching and tucks, sleeves and back also trimmed in the same way, with a stock collar to match; this waist in all colors at $11.00; in black at $10.00.

An extra choice lot of exquisitely beautiful imported French organdles, white grounds with the very choicest of floral designs, done in the beautiful pastel colors; nearly so different styles in the collection. They are short length pieces so that your dress will not be duplicated a number of times in the city; the price is 40c.

BANTA BARBARA, March 11.—[Regular Correspondence.] Sheriff Nat Stewart, with two men to assist him, went out today to make a search for the body of one Miguel Arelianea, a squatter, who has been missing for the past two months. Arelianes had a claim in what is known as the Coyote Cañon, a wild and lonely spot. Arelianes went into the cañon in December and has never been seen since. Several presons have searched the immediate ground about the claim. The camp was deserted some time ago and appears to have been left by one who expected to return shortly. It is not left as Arelianea usually left it when going away for any length of time. The Sheriff and the missing man's family and friends believe that there has been foul play.

Of Treasting Dyspopula and Stemach Tronhas Is Universe and Unsciontific.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but even now a course of dieting is generally the first thing recommended for a case of indigestion or any stomach trouble.

Many people with weak digestion, as well as some physicians, consider the first step to take in altempting to cure indigestion is to restrict the diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to cut down the amount of food eaten to barely enough to keep soul and body together. In other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting to a man already suffering from starvation because indigestion itself starves every organ, nerve and fiber in the body.

What people with poor digestion most used is abundant nutrition, plenty of good, wholesome, properly cooked food, and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it.

This is exactly the purpose for which stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and the true reason why they cure the worst cases of stomach trouble.

Eat a sufficient amount of wholesome food and after each meal take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to promptly digest it.

In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not, one grain of the active digestive principle in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets being sufficient to digest 3000 grains of meat, eggs or other albuminous food.

Dr. Harlandson and Dr. Redwell recommend these tablets in all cases of defective digestive because the pepsin and disatase in them are absolutely free from animal matter and other impurities, and being pleasant to the taste are as safe and harmiess for the child as for the adult.

All drug stores sell this excellent preparation and the daily use of them after meals will be of great benefit, not only as an immediate

The system of the property of ing of numerous swamps amid frequent heavy rains, and attended by the hardships which such an active campaign involves.

More recently Capt. Cuiver was selected as provost-marshal for the town of Mexico, a place of some 18,000 inhabitants, situated near Mt. Arayat, which was invested by a large force of insurrectos and numerous bands of Ladrones (robbers.) He succeeded in organising a civil government, and made almost daily hikes (excursions) into the country. These excursions resulted in frequent skirmishes, with frequent captures of prisoners and the gaining of valuable information.

The captain speaks lightly of the way the Filipinos tried to trick him. "A pony was brought into camp one day from the direction of Mt. Arayat." said he yesterday, in telling of the incident. "The native who came with it told the outpost he had brought the beast to sell to the captain. The pony was a fair-looking one, and was offered very cheap, so I bought it. I found it was necessary to tame and break him. which I proceeded to do in approved cavalry style, so it was not long before I had him so I could ride him. A few days later I was out with my battalion adjutant searching for a trail which I knew the insurrectos had made from Mt. Arayat to the Rio Grande. When we had found the trail and started to return the pony concluded to divest himself of his burden, and proceeded to do it with apparently well-acquired skill by landing me on my left hip and back. As soon as I was able to speak I requested the adjutant to secure the pony, which was skirting the broad ditch and trying to escape in the direction of the insurrectos had made from the insurectos had made from proceeded to do it with apparently well-acquired skill by landing me on my left hip and back. As soon as I was able to speak I requested the adjutant to secure the pony, which was skirting the broad ditch and trying to escape in subduing him. By that time I was pretty well fatigued, and when approaching our outpost I dismounted and rested. When I started to mount the ani

"The Macabebes have proved very loyal to our government as soldiers under the leadership of Maj. Batson, Lieut. Quinlin and others. They have led in a number of campaigns, and deserve great credit for their courage, faithfulness and effective service rendered during the past months. The organization of one or two Macabebe regiments would be a wise movement on the part of the war department.

"The administration is full of embarrassing and perplexing questions, while planning campaigns of war, establishing civil government and dealing with questions of great diplomatic import to the future."
